

NEW WORLD GENERATION INC.

February 20, 2014

Dear Shareholder,

We as a board hope this newsletter finds you and your families well. It has been a long winter, but though blustery, positive things have been taking place here at NWG.

Most significantly, testing is currently taking place on an advanced system for compressed air generation.

NWG is working with a Company, with an impressive engineering team. They too are anxious to bring this technology to market. This Company has been diligent in producing their portion of our collective project. We are encouraged by initial results, however, critical testing needs to be completed prior to moving to a larger unit for demonstration.

Markets are ready for a cost effective reliable system, which is essential to incorporate renewable power as a real competitor to fossil fuels.

NWG has been engaged with a company out of California, working on a large project for "grid smoothing". The company has agreed to incorporate our storage unit, if testing provides the evidence required.

In addition to the above, NWG has been busy bringing our company website up to date. There has been some delay, due to work load, and prioritizing, however, once the site is live, notice will be sent to all shareholders.

More information will become available once testing is completed.

Sincerely,

Peter Routliff, NWG Chair
