

NEW WORLD GENERATION INC.

March 17, 2016

Dear Shareholder,

The company has been making diligent efforts to market the ESME waste heat to power product and has focused attention on the Ontario market. ESME has been and continues to meet with utility companies to introduce our technology and to seek their assistance in making introductions to industries within their service area who can benefit from our technology. This is a very important step to our growth and meetings with the biggest players in the industry are scheduled within the next two weeks. We are hopeful that this will create opportunities for us to find an interested customer.

ESME met with our technical partner along with our legal counsel to begin the formal contractual negotiations to protect our intellectual property and designs. We also needed to secure their technical support and lock up their proprietary turbine designs. This is necessary for us to move forward to secure customers for our initial prototype. This partnership will help customers see that the risk to implement our product is minimal. We hope to execute these documents within the next few weeks.

Over the last two months NWG has re-programmed the company website. This has been done to enable changes and additions to the site, with less effort and expense. This work also displays the NWG site better on hand held devices. A notice was sent to shareholders with new passcodes to access the site. These codes may be changed periodically to ensure confidentiality, however, a notice will be sent in close succession to any updates.

With regards,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read 'Peter Routliff'.

Peter Routliff, NWG Chair